FCA US Partners with National Coalition of Certification Centers in National Technician Training Program

Thursday, July 16, 2015, FCA US LLC today announced a strategic automotive technician program with the National Coalition of Certification Centers (NC3) to develop a critical stream of highly-trained technicians for FCA US dealers nationwide.

FCA US has established the Mopar CAP Local program in partnership with NC3 in order to train approximately 1,000 students annually in more than 100 colleges. The program builds on the existing FCA US Mopar CAP program by providing a larger geographic footprint to serve more dealers in a highly scalable, online certification model. Via the program, general automotive students enrolled in select two-year programs across the country will simultaneously be certified as Mopar Level 1 Technicians.

According to John Fox, Global Director of Dealer Training at FCA US, “Leveraging NC3’s network of outstanding educational members and rigorous performance standards, the Mopar CAP Local Program will allow FCA US to reach the corporation’s goal of more than 5,000 additional skilled service technicians by 2018”. Mr. Fox added, “Not only will our dealerships gain much needed, highly-skilled technicians, but each will have the specialized training and familiarity with FCA dealerships to make them highly effective on day one of employment.”

In conjunction with FCA’s New Technician Exemption Program, incoming Mopar CAP Local employees will be able to undertake Level 2 Technician service gaining accelerated technical experience while providing dealerships much needed meaningful service support.
Reflecting on the new Mopar CAP Local partnership with FCA US, Roger Tadajewski, Executive Director of NC3 noted, “The foresight and national leadership that FCA has taken toward training the next generation of skilled professionals puts it in a class of its own across all industries beyond automotive. Combined with NC3’s colleges’ deep commitment to industry-education partnerships and industry-driven education, the Mopar CAP Local program sets a new bar in America for how training should be conducted.”
